Scout Heads of West Take Boating Course

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

SANTA BARBARA, Calif.—A number of boys' camps in The Pacific Boating Center as a protection against 30,000 questions in the Leaders in Santa Barbara are leaving no stone unturned to make their outing as safe as possible.

Each spring for many years the Leaders in Santa Barbara are favored with more than 30 Boy Scout camps, but this year the number is more than 50, and the Leaders' Council has arranged a boating course for the "Commissioners' most dangerous moment."

Boating experts from the sea-going division of the Boy Scouts of America will be in charge of the boating course, which will last for two weeks. Each camp will be required to have a certain number of boys who can swim 100 yards and tread water for 10 minutes. Boy Scouts from other camps will be allowed to enter the course.

The boating course is the result of a request made by Dr. Elmer L. Bierce, director of the Boy Scouts of America, to the Leaders in Santa Barbara that they conduct a boating course for the Scouts in camp.

The Leaders' Council has arranged with the Santa Barbara Motor Boat Club to use its boats and motors for the course. Instruction will be given by members of the club.

Chemistry's Magna Charta, Found in Old Collection

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, March 15—The discovery of the Massachusetts Historical Society near Quincy of the "Magna Charta of chemistry" in the "Matrices," according to Lessing Hicks of the American Chemical Society, is regarded in chemical circles as comparable in importance to the discovery of the Rosetta stone for explaining the relationship of the various languages in ancient times.

The find is an ancient manuscript dating from a time when alchemy was the only chemistry known, and is believed to have been written by Thomas Norton of Bristol, England, in the 15th century. It contains all the fundamental principles of alchemy, which was the forerunner of modern chemistry.

Interest here and in Europe, the announcement said.

One reason for this was, no doubt, accumulation."

One reason for this was, no doubt, that people in the Scriptures did not have the power to cure disease: sickness was regarded as a visitation of God (Ex. 15:26; Deut. 28:21, 22; II Kings 15:5; II Chron. 26:20; Isa. 53:4; Matt. 8:17; Luke 7:21; I Cor. 11:30). Sickness was a chastisement for sin, and the only way to overcome it was to repent of sin and to turn to God (II Chron. 7:14; Jer. 30:17; Hosea 6:1; Jas. 5:14-16). Sickness was a visitation of God (

America's Part in Europe

GERMANY'S action in scrapping Part V of the Versailles Treaty has put up to the American people some grave questions of national policy:

1. Should Washington protest to Berlin?
2. What is America's interest in the peace of Europe?
3. How can that interest be most wisely and effectively safeguarded?

Part V of the Treaty of Versailles—the section taken in Berlin last June, when the Hoover moratorium was announced—is the one which provides for the demilitarization of the Rhineland. Another section provides for the payment of reparations. Germany has already paid about $5,000,000,000 on account of reparations. Under the Young plan she is to pay $2,000,000,000 more. Then she will be free of reparations forever.

Part V of the Treaty of Versailles is the one which Germany has now denounced. Germany has not denounced the Young plan. Germany has not denounced the section of Part V which provides for the payment of reparations. Germany has denounced only that section of Part V which provides for the demilitarization of the Rhineland.

Germany has not denounced the Young plan because she cannot denounce it. The Young plan is a contract. Germany has not denounced the section of Part V which provides for the demilitarization of the Rhineland because she can denounce it. That section is not a contract. It is a unilateral imposition.

Germany has denounced the section of Part V which provides for the demilitarization of the Rhineland because she is strong enough to denounce it. She is strong enough to denounce it because she has been disarmed. She has been disarmed because she was defeated in the war. She was defeated in the war because she was attacked by the Allies. She was attacked by the Allies because she was the aggressor

House Passes Bonus for $2,000,000,000

Issue of New Money Voted Passed Through by 318 to 96 Following Night Session

Compromise in Upper Chamber Expected Which Will Meet With General Approval

President Has Threatened, However, to Veto This Measure if It Comes to Him—House Victory Is One for Veterans of Foreign Wars

Special from the Christian Science Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, March 25—Ending nearly three days and two nights of debate, and after defeating a motion to recommit the bill, the House of Representatives today passed the Bonus Bill today and sent a message to the Senate urging that body to concur in the measure which would provide for the issuance of $2,000,000,000 in new money.

The vote was 318 to 96, which is more than the two thirds which would be required to override a veto by the President.

The vote on the motion to recommit was 219 to 195.

Victory for the bonus forces in the House was assured when the Democratic leadership decided to support the measure. Speaker Garner, Majority Leader Rainey, Representative Byrns, Democratic whip, and Representative Collier, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, all voted for the bill.

LIVING PROTECTION

The $52,000 it yours the first time you need it.

As long as you maintain this reserve intact you will receive each month, it you desire, supplementing as much as you have laid aside monthly during your productive years, multiplied by 10 each month it you desire. Many have found the reserve fund for emergencies and the protection they got "added" when you are too old to work, and provided an estate to your family.

An Investors Syndicate PAYING PROTECTION Contract permits you to set your own pace in building up a reserve that will provide money to supplement or replace your income. Ten dollars a month, for 180 months, creates a reserve of $2,200; while $108 a month provides $52,000 in the same period of time.

Child Dome Sent Out on W'reels

To Bid Tourists to New England

Duplicity Men Submit Claims—Maine Originated Idea, New Hampshire Started Camps, Vermont Wins Scullers, Rhode Island Has Cool Nights

It's dome resplendent with tiers of lights, a model of the Massachusetts State House, mounted on a pure chassis, set out across country from Boston to Reno, Nevada, and it's going to bid tourists to New England to come and see the sights.

The cool nights and warm waters of Rhode Island were blessed next by Frank Gilman, who was followed by E. E. Mason of Connecticut. Mr. Mason told of plans for the Tercentenary Celebration in the State, which promises to be a joint function of the State Boards of Trade, Boston Chamber of Commerce, Historical Society, which preceded the Pilgrims, and which marked the observance of the Tercentenary Celebration of the State Homes on its 300th anniversary. Which will include an Industrial Exposition, sponsored by Frank Gilman, who was followed by E. E. Mason of Connecticut. Mr. Mason told of plans for the Tercentenary Celebration in the State, which promises to be a joint function of the State Boards of Trade, Boston Chamber of Commerce, Historical Society, which preceded the Pilgrims, and which marked the observance of the Tercentenary Celebration of the State Homes on its 300th anniversary. Which will include an Industrial Exposition, sponsored by the Tercentenary Celebration Committee, and which will include contributions of Yankee ingenuity to modern American comfort and convenience.

The Speech

Leaving the pellucid of the platform, Mr. Gilman, the meeting adjourned until the next day in the usual way in the State Houses and Boston Chamber of Commerce, and embodied a new embodiment. England stands as one embodiment.

The model is 25 feet long and 13 feet high. It was built by Bird & Son of East Walpole, Mass., and equipped with radio and amplifying apparatus by the General Electric Company. The bus chassis was provided by the Grey Line Sightseeing Company, which is operating the dome-car over its regular routes in and about Boston.

Boston is naturally the hub of all State.

A new movie has been made of the dome, showing it in all its splendor, and in action—on the road, in front of the Massachusetts State House, in the Boston Common, and in front of the Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Ruth Gilman, daughter of Frank Gilman, vice-president of the Yankee Clipper Line, and organizer of the Yankee Clipper Club, and Miss Dorothy Hawkes of Milton, C. Bolton chairman of the Massachusetts State Committee, were selected as the first members of the Yankee Clipper Club, Associated Industries of Massachusetts and the Chamber of Commerce.

From each of the six New England States came representative speakers.

Miss Gilman introduced by C. Nicholas Keating, president of the Yankee Clipper Club, and organizer thereof, and Miss Hawkes by Miss Gilman.

Governor Curley of Massachusetts and Governor Winant of New Hampshire sent messages of greeting.

Governor Curley's message was read by Frank Gilman, who was followed by Governor Winant of New Hampshire, who told of the Granite State's plans for the Tercentenary.

Doll & Richards of Newbury Street.
Hannah Winter Smith is a delightful milliner. There are many combinations of colors in her hats, and the combinations are always successful. Miss Smith is as interested in the shape of a hat as she is in the combination of colors. She has a definite idea of what is becoming to the face and figure, and she knows how to make a hat that will be becoming.
Miss Winter's hats are not extreme in style, but they have a certain smartness that is very attractive.

A Butterfly as a Christmas Guest

SPRING began for me on Christmas Eve. And for a moment I was almost tempted to go enterprising—because it would have been such fun to be the first person to see a butterfly this season. But, of course, I shall wait for the sunshine and the flowers. Besides, I am not sure that I should be welcome. Perhaps I am not the kind of person butterflies like to visit.

It all began with a caterpillar. I found him on the sidewalk, on my way to the corner grocery. He was a handsome fellow, with a brown body and a yellow head, and he was crawling along as if he had a definite destination in mind. I stopped to watch him, and he paused, too, and looked around him with his head held high. Then he started off again, and I followed him for a few steps. He seemed to be going somewhere, and I wondered where. Perhaps he was looking for a place to spend the winter. Perhaps he was hungry and was searching for food. Perhaps he was lonely and was looking for companionship. I wished I could help him in some way, but I could not think of anything I could do for him. So I left him to his own devices and went on my way.

When I came back from the grocery, I looked for him, but he was nowhere in sight. I was disappointed, for I had hoped to see him again. I had thought that I might take him home with me and keep him in a box in my room, where I could watch him and study him. I had never had a caterpillar for a pet, and I was sure that he would be interesting. But he had disappeared, and I went on into the house.

Several days later I found a cocoon hanging from a twig on the bush in front of the house. I knew that it was a cocoon because I had seen one in a museum. I had also seen pictures of cocoons in books. I was sure that my caterpillar friend had made it, and I was glad that he had found a safe place in which to spend the winter. I wondered if he would remember me when he awoke in the spring, and if he would be grateful to me for having helped him on his way. I thought that he would be, and I looked forward to seeing him again.

Then I began to wonder what kind of butterfly he would be. I had seen many kinds in museums, and I had seen pictures of many more. I knew that there were yellow butterflies and white butterflies and blue butterflies and orange butterflies and black butterflies and brown butterflies. I knew that there were butterflies with spots and butterflies with stripes, and butterflies with eyes on their wings. I knew that there were butterflies with tails and butterflies without tails. I knew that there were butterflies with feathery antennae and butterflies with knobbed antennae. I knew that there were butterflies that were small and butterflies that were large. I knew that there were butterflies that were beautiful and butterflies that were not beautiful at all. But I did not know what kind of butterfly my caterpillar friend would be.

I thought about him a great deal during the autumn and winter. I thought about him when I was eating my breakfast, and when I was eating my dinner, and when I was eating my supper. I thought about him when I was reading the newspaper, and when I was reading a book, and when I was writing a letter. I thought about him when I was walking to the corner grocery, and when I was walking to the corner drug store, and when I was walking to the corner post office. I thought about him when I was sitting in my room, and when I was sitting in the living room, and when I was sitting in the dining room. I thought about him when I was sitting in the kitchen, and when I was sitting in the bathroom. I thought about him when I was sitting in the garden, and when I was sitting in the garage. I thought about him when I was sitting in the attic, and when I was sitting in the cellar. I thought about him when I was sitting in the basement, and when I was sitting in the back yard. I thought about him when I was sitting in the front yard, and when I was sitting in the side yard. I thought about him when I was sitting in the vestibule, and when I was sitting in the hall. I thought about him when I was sitting on the porch, and when I was sitting on the steps. I thought about him when I was sitting on the sidewalk, and when I was sitting on the curbstone. I thought about him when I was sitting in the street, and when I was sitting in the gutter. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the road, and when I was sitting in the middle of the block. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the square, and when I was sitting in the middle of the city. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the country, and when I was sitting in the middle of the village. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the town, and when I was sitting in the middle of the state. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the country, and when I was sitting in the middle of the continent. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the hemisphere, and when I was sitting in the middle of the world. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of the universe, and when I was sitting in the middle of space. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of time, and when I was sitting in the middle of eternity. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of infinity, and when I was sitting in the middle of nothing. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of myself, and when I was sitting in the middle of my thoughts. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of my dreams, and when I was sitting in the middle of my hopes. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of my fears, and when I was sitting in the middle of my doubts. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of my sorrows, and when I was sitting in the middle of my joys. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of my sins, and when I was sitting in the middle of my virtues. I thought about him when I was sitting in the middle of my faults, and when I was sitting in the middle of my failures. Special from The Christian Science Monitor Bureau

New York

IN THE late afternoon the air of the duchess woman's world invites to the call of a western princess. "Make and dress," is the message, "and be ready by five o'clock." Then, with the dusk, the duchess herself is ready to receive her guests in the drawing room of her apartment.

Our illustrations represent distinct and exciting choices in an assortment of costumes that are all correct for the occasion, but become active.

We Dine and Dance

Special from The Christian Science Monitor Bureau

By Helen Johnson Keyes

Our illustration at upper left, which is the duchess woman's choice for the dinner dance, is a model of black velvet and white satin. The bodice is of the velvet, cut out at the neckline to show the white satin vest. The sleeves are of the white satin, and the skirt of the velvet, which is cut on the bias and has a slight train in back. The bodice is fastened with small white satin buttons.

The dress at upper right, which is also for dancing, is of white satin, with a bodice of black velvet. The skirt is of white satin, cut on the bias, and has a slight train in back. The bodice is fastened with small white satin buttons.

The illustration at upper right is of a black velvet afternoon dress with a white satin vest. The skirt is of black velvet, cut on the bias, and has a slight train in back. The bodice is fastened with small white satin buttons.

Utility Issues Active Feature of an Irregular Stock Market • Money Markets and Commodity Quotations

Closing Prices on N.Y. Stock Exchange

Utilities Are Outstanding

Feature—Some Industrial Issues Decline

By Forrest Price

Following yesterday's late public efforts apparently were lacking to give support to the market in general, stocks mapped a moderately irregular course today, with utilities and specialties showing the best resistance to the selling pressure. Industrials and rails were inclined to follow the trend of the commodity markets, which were generally lower.

Trading was active, with transfers approximating 3,000,000 shares. Specialties and utilities were in demand, while the rails were under pressure. Industrials were irregular, with the list showing a mixed trend.

Stocks were heavy in the morning session, with the market closing at the lowest levels of the day. Rallies in the afternoon were checked by the selling of those who had bought on the declines.

Bonds were irregular. Foreign issues were heavy. Rails were lower. Utilities were firm. Industrials were irregular.

Cotton: Firm; buying on reports of reduction of acreage.

Sugar: Higher; trade buying.

Wheat: Higher; new talk of export business.

Corn: Firm; shorts taking profits.

Cattle: Steady to strong.

Hogs: 15 to 30c higher; top $3.90.

Sheep: Steady.

Foreign

London: An easy tendency developed in the stock exchange again today, according to the weekly circular of the Credit Lyonnais. Home rails were dull and lower. Oils were irregular. Rubbers were weak. Diamonds were steady. Coppers were easier. Textiles were dull and lower. Argentine issues were irregular.

Chicago

Wheat: Higher; new talk of export business.

Corn: Firm; shorts taking profits.

Cattle: Steady to strong.

Hogs: 15 to 30c higher; top $3.90.

Sheep: Steady.

Foreign Exchange

Cotton: Firm; increase of Portuguese stocks.

Sugar: Higher; trade buying.

Wheat: Higher; new talk of export business.

Corn: Firm; increase of Portuguese stocks.

Pound bill of House of Representatives to authorize Secretary of Treasury to buy silver.

Markets at a Glance

After the first hour of the week trading in the New York stock market to date showed a decrease of $20,000,000 as indicated by weekly reports of the clearing houses.

Trading in foreign exchange markets was featureless.
